We buy buildings other investors walk past, rebuild them properly, and let them to a standard that keeps them full. These are the last three completed projects, told honestly: what we paid, what we spent, what each building is worth now and what it earns.

CASE STUDY

Northgate

Darlington

COMPLETED · FULLY LET

Our largest completed project and the clearest picture of how we work. When we bought it for £110,000 — sourced off-market, direct from the vendor — it was a tired semi-commercial building: an empty shop on the ground floor, a flat on the top floor and a derelict basement. The kind of property most investors walk straight past — but we could see what it could become, and we knew the demand was there.

A total project cost of £460,000 — including finance, interest and fees — re-engineered the building into six design-led studios and six en-suite letting rooms, with each floor served by its own communal kitchen for the shared en-suite bedrooms: a fully licensed 12-bed building.

This was a full back-to-brick rebuild, run by our own team from planning through to completion: the basement floor dug out and relaid, the ceiling height in the two front bedrooms raised, the bay windows rebuilt from the basement up, old stairwells removed, new windows, doors and suspended ceilings throughout, and the whole building soundproofed and thermally upgraded.

The finished asset was refinanced at £750,000 and produces £109,000 a year in rent — fully let, with lettings and management handled in-house by Capital One Property Management.

CASE STUDY

Station Road

COMPLETED · FULLY LET

Bought for £115,000 — sourced direct from the vendor — Station Road needed more than paint: it needed rethinking. The building was stripped back to the bones and rebuilt from the frame out into a licensed six-bed HMO: six en-suite letting bedrooms, each complete with its own tea station.

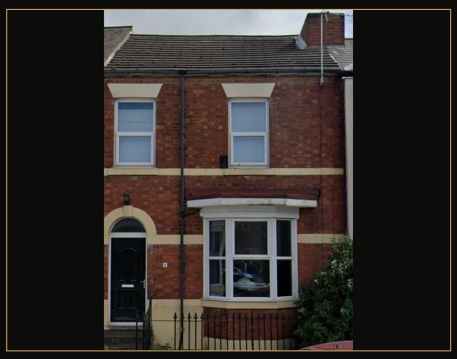

The roof was replaced in full, the top-floor loft room dropped to achieve proper head height in the top bedroom, a new stairwell installed and the basement tanked. On the first floor, walls came out to open the space up for a new communal kitchen and a further en-suite bedroom — a full back-to-brick refurbishment, finished to a high standard to suit today's working professionals.

A £140,000 build brought every part of the building up to the standard we let at. The completed property was refinanced at £320,000 and now earns £49,000 a year — fully let and managed by our own team.

Station Road was delivered by our team through a dedicated joint-venture company, with the project funded by a private investor — the same structure we offer investors today, proven in brick.

Alderson Street

Hartlepool

COMPLETED · FULLY LICENSED

Alderson Street was picked up on the open market for £90,000 — not in terrible condition when we acquired it, but still nowhere near the standard we let at, or the requirements of a licensable six-bedroom HMO. So it got the same treatment as everything we build: a full back-to-brick refurbishment.

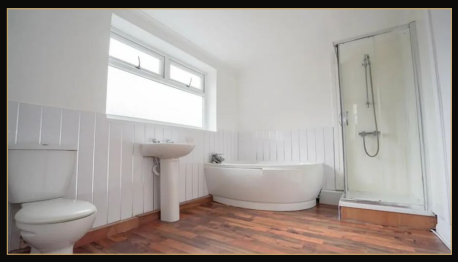

£108,000 of works rebuilt it room by room: new stud walls framing the attic bedrooms, new suspended ceilings, a newly formed en-suite to every bedroom, the building thermally upgraded, insulated and freshly plastered throughout, and a shared kitchen fitted — all compliant with today's regulations and completed to a high specification. Licensing, room sizes, fire regulation: HMO conversion is detail work, and doing it properly is the difference between an asset and a liability.

The finished building is a £260,000 asset producing £43,200 a year — fully licensed, with rooms let and managed by our own team.
